out of the Mountaynes, on both ſides verie loftie: this place is of a wonderfull ſtrength for reſiſting of the Enemies: Now little after mid-day, we came to pitch our Tents towards the end of the ſaid paſſage, by a faire Riuer ſide.

The ſixe and twentieth, paſſing along the Riuer ſide, on the high way, wee found two men moſt miſerably put to death, hauing each of them a ſtake thruſt in at his Fundament, through his bodie, and ſo out by his necke; the ſtake being ſet vp right on end: the cauſe was for killing of a Ianizarie, they being Chriſtians. The Grand Signior paſſing by, cauſed them ſo to ſuffer.

The eight and twentieth, we came to a Towne, called Neeſa, and a little before our comming to the ſame, we ſaw two men ſtaked as afore-ſaid, who were Tranſiluanians, came purpoſely to ſpie and view the Campe: alſo at this Townes end, there were of Chriſtians heads ſtead, and ſtopt full of Hay hanged on poſts by ſtrings, to the number of three hundred which foure moneths before were ſlaine by Turkes, vnder Mahomet Baſſa, at Boſna: From the entrance of the ſtraight paſſage to this place are ten miles, and from Sofpa to this place all high Mountaynes, rockie and troubleſome to trauell: theſe Mountaynes part Seruia and Sclauonia, this Citie is ſituated in a verie delectable Valley, hauing towards the Weſt-ſide a faire Plaine, that ſtretcheth it ſelfe towards Albania and Macedonia, here we reſted all that day and night. Neeſa.

The third of Auguſt, wee came to ſpread our Tents cloſe by the mayne Campe, halfe a mile diſtant from Belgrado, which is a maruellous great Plaine adioyning to the Citie, and about the midſt of the Campe, the Grand Signior his Pauillion is alwayes placed; and now hard by his Pauillion by force of hands was raiſed a ſmall Hill, vpon which was growne a Haw-thorne, cut artificially ſpreading, which made a maruellous good ſhadow: euery Euening the Great Turke would aſcend into it to view his Campe, and to be ſeene of his people, being a cuſtome amongſt the Turkes, his Souldiers in the Wars to ſee their King, once in foure and twentie houres.

HONDIVS his Map of Hungaric.
